"The Thorpedo" (from Pop Culture Monster).

Stephanie Thorpe, actor, director, new media geek extraordinaire. But on top of all that, she's also one of the brains behind the fantastic ElfQuest: A Fan Imagining which brought her vision of the series to the screen. She crowdfunded all the money for the production, and even got the creators of ElfQuest behind the project. It was a huge success, and even SAG got behind it - hosting the premiere party!

But why should you follow her on Twitter?

Because she talks geek all the time. And she's hilarious to boot! Follow her @TheStephThorpe

Happy New Year!

Here's hoping 2012 continues to be as busy as last year. I finished off 2011 with a pretty nifty honor: Pop Culture Monster (an international website with a large following) listed me as one of their top "Geeks and Nerds of 2011" alongside Zachary Levi, Felicia Day, and Robin Williams. I was blown away! And January started with a bang! The series Gold: Night of the Zombie King that I starred in received 5 nominations from the International Academy of Web Television Awards (IAWTV). The awards show was held during CES in Vegas, and was a very exciting event!

I also had the pleasure of working with Joan Rivers on the new season of her show. It was an amazing experience to act beside a comedy icon of her calibre. She gave me one of the best compliments of my life when she remarked that I had great comedic timing, and she insisted on taking the picture below. Best wishes for 2012 everyone & I look forward to connecting again soon!
