September and October were very busy months for me! I shot 10 episodes of the new series, "Shelf Life", attended the New York Television Festival (NYTVF), and then went on to GeekGirlCon in Seattle. I'm thrilled to announce that "Night of the Zombie King" was an official selection at the NYTVF! I'm a series regular in it, and was nominated for Best Supporting Actress. I also had several exciting auditions while I was in New York: one for a Series Regular in a new Canadian pilot. Then, I was off to GeekGirlCon, where I was invited to speak on two panels. If you haven't heard of it, GeekGirlCon premiered this year as an event to celebrate womens' contribution to geek culture. On the first panel, Women in Fantasy, I spoke about my project, "ElfQuest: A Fan Imagining", which I directed, produced and starred in. The second focused on Geek Characters in Pop Culture, and I had the pleasure to share the panel with producers from the TV shows Lost and Eureka. I hope you are well and I look forward to meeting with you soon!
